About the “Generations” Project
“From Generation to Generation: Making a Life in South Los Angeles, 1940–2005” is a new community heritage project of the Southern California Library under the California Council for the Humanities Communities Speak program.

“Generations” will tell the real stories of the area’s distinctive neighborhoods and communities through the voices of several generations of Black, White, Asian, and Latino community members who, together, have created the history of South Los Angeles.

This groundbreaking project is one of ten in the Communities Speak program, launched by the California Council for the Humanities under its California Stories initiative. The project is also supported in part by a grant from the California Community Foundation.
